

The Triumph 800 features an en-suite facility

Triumph in the making

Sunncamp continues its drive for style, individuality and innovative design

SUNNCAMP HAS long been recognised as a manufacturer of quality family tents, and the new range for 2009 will only help reinforce its position in the market as a producer of units with stylish, individual and innovative design.

Highlights of the range include the all steel framed Triumph, available in four or eight-berth models and both featuring en-suite facilities; a new four-berth touring sized addition to the ever-popular Family Vario range; and a very affordable polycotton option of the Shadow 800. There is also a welcome surprise in store for all current owners of the much-loved SunnCamp Evolution series of tents.

The Evolution series had already proved popular amongst touring campers, and last year the introduction of the Evolution 300 and Evolution 600 DL models also brought family campers and backpackers on board. For 2009, SunnCamp has taken careful note of campers comments and introduced a range of much-awaited door canopies to fit the Evolution tents, which can retro fit to previous years models. Not only do they provide excellent protection, but they also enhance the look.

The new Triumph 800 is a spacious, all steel framed tent. It offers a porch-covered front door, rear door, massive living area, and the option of increasing the sleeping capacity to ten people with an 'optional extra' two-berth inner tent. Innovatively, it is the first tent to offer en-suite facilities to both of the four-berth bedrooms. This feature is ideal for housing a toilet and washbasin, making nighttime calls of nature so much easier. Alternatively, the en-suite would make for excellent wardrobe or other storage facilities. With the touring market in mind, SunnCamp also offers a four-berth version, the Triumph 400, with all the same features and including one en-suite.

Last season's radical update of the Family Vario range of tents proved to be hugely popular and sales of all sizes soared. This year's range sees an additional new four-berth touring version, the Family Vario 400, joining the series. With all the same hi-spec features, front and side canopies, a side storeroom, two separate two-berth inner tents, and not forgetting the five-year pole guarantee, this tent will no doubt draw much interest.

Polycotton tents offering the benefits of fabric breathability have become popular in the last couple of years. Unfortunately, their hefty price tag can put them out of reach of many campers, especially in the current economic climate. However, it is worth checking out the new Shadow 800 PC, a polycotton version of SunnCamp's popular eight-berth tunnel tent. It comes in a classic and timeless green and cream colourway, and offers breathability and affordability.

Also new in SunnCamp's 'Classic' range of affordable tents is another all steel framed family tent, the Paragon 600. This six-berth tunnel has a built-in front sun canopy, a covered side entrance and an impressive 220cm of headroom. Plenty of windows and ventilation also give this tent a spacious and airy feel.

The popular Invader 600 tunnel tent has also undergone a complete makeover for 2009, with a new green and grey colour scheme, and a fully sewn-in groundsheet also added.■
